ABOUT DELEGATES TO CONVENTIONS

"What's all this fuss about instructed and uninstructed delegations in the Republican party," I have been asked several times lately.

Basically it is determination of the question whether the delegates to the Republican convention at Cleveland will be sent with instructions to favor only one candidate for the nomination for the presidency, or whether the 44 men and women who will represent us there will go free and untrammeled and able to exercise their best judgment in the selection of the man who will be the G. O. P. standard bearer.

A LITTLE HISTORY

I sat in the Republican convention in Chicago which nominated Warren G. Harding for the presidency, and I learned a great deal in those few days. One of the great truths I gleaned was that the man who apparently is in the lead with the greatest number of votes, but has not a majority, very seldom captures the gonfalon. Major General Leonard Wood at the beginning of the balloting mustered the greatest strength, closely followed by Governor Frank Lowden of Illinois. The number of votes polled by Harding on the first ballot was not enough to even create a ripple in the convention. Yet Harding eventually won the nomination and was elected president.

I also had occasion to see and realize what a mess an instructed or pledged delegation can get itself into. Arizona, of which State I was then a resident had instructed its delegation to vote for General Wood. At the head of that delegation was Albert Sames, then an at-

SAN JOSE, April 23—UP—Peter Voss, aged, picturesque prospector, maintained an aloof silence tonight as San Jose police accused him of shooting and critically wounding Dr. Jasper Gattuccio, San Jose dentist.

Physicians at a local hospital reported they held out slight hope for Dr. Gattuccio's recovery.

SHOT IN HEAD

Voss, according to Special Deputy Agnew Shea, shot Gattuccio in the back of the head with a single-barreled shot-gun while the latter was parked in his car about 15 miles south of San Jose on the Monterey highway.

ETHIOPIAN VICTORIES ARE CLAIMED

ADDIS ABABA, April 23.—UP — Ethiopia today claimed victory over Italian forces on the northern and southern fronts but admitted heavy losses and continued severe fighting.

The Dedjazmach Nasibu, Governor of Harar, radioed the government that 3,000 casualties on both sides resulted from a fierce battle between Italians and Ethiopians near Dennan, southwest of the important water wells at Sasah Panch.

ROADS FLOODED

On the northern front thousands of Ethiopian warriors arrived at Tarmaburrh the 12,000 foot mountain pass guarding the Addis Ababa plateau. After dynamiting and flooding the Dessye-Addis Ababa highway they took up the seemingly impregnable positions and united for the expected Italian advance against the capital.

LAST STAND

These troops, reorganizing for a last, desperate stand in defense of the capital were reinforced by all available units from the Addis Ababa artillery school and strong detachments from Emperor Haile Selassie's imperial bodyguard.

The Emperor's whereabouts was kept a close secret but it was understood he was fighting near Warrah Hailu with remnants of his bodyguard.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 23—UP—Charges by Mayor Edmund O. Hanson of Santa Barbara that WPA workers must register Democratic to obtain work relief were challenged today by Ralph C. Wadsworth, assistant state WPA administrator.

"We know there is absolutely nothing to these charges," Wadsworth said. "Mayor Hanson is unfriendly to WPA and was speaking out of pique. However, we will give him a chance to present facts to corroborate his statement."

Hanson made his charges during the recent meeting here of the executive council of the U. S. conference of mayors, when Frank Shaw, mayor of Los Angeles, gave a report on work relief in Los Angeles county.

Whether Frost will be rearrested on a federal warrant charging him with crossing a state border to avoid prosecution on a felony charge was not decided immediately by federal officers.

Judge Moran made his ruling within half an hour after attorneys for both sides concluded their arguments.

Trusty Soused Before Making Liberty Dash

MARTINEZ, April 23 — Back from Folsom penitentiary where they left James Victor Johnson, 24, to serve a term of one to ten years for his escape attempt Tuesday, officers today began an investigation to learn where Johnson, a county jail trusty, secured ten bottles of beer.

Johnson, serving a year under sentence March 5 for auto thievery, stole the automobile of Oscar Olson, county hospital superintendent, from the hospital grounds, where Johnson was employed as a trusty. After wrecking the car he begged a ride to Richmond and was found there by police at midnight cowering in the grass in a vacant lot.

Before his departure for Folsom yesterday afternoon under a speedy sentence in superior court, Johnson revealed he came down town from the hospital grounds and secured two bottles of beer, consumed them, and then returned for eight more bottles, which he also drank.

He told Judge A. F. Bray, he was driving 70 miles an hour when the car overturned. Although the machine rolled over several times Johnson escaped with superficial wounds.

Jew Undertaker Leading Money Dog At Track

Seven times a winner and the leading money dog at the track, Jew Undertaker raced brilliantly last night to win the semi-finals of the Great East Bay Elimination at El Cerrito Kennel club, bottoming Brown Jug of the My Laddie family and Buddy Mac of Pecas Valley Kennel. Alder Gulch was eliminated, leaving the three money dogs and Gallard for the next heat Tuesday evening.

In a five-dog field and boasting such a great money record, Jew Undertaker still lacks backers, the crowd preferring to install Buddy Mac the 7 to 5 favorite. Jew Undertaker closed at 4 to 1, and returned $10.20 on preferred options. The quiniela in this short field reached the staggering sum of $10.40 — staggering because nearly everybod hooked up the winner with another dog.

In eight heats Jew Undertaker, owned by T. M. Curtis, has finished out of the money only once.

Breaking on top, Jew Undertaker gained a comfortable lead on the backstretch only to be caught and shoved on the last turn as Brown Jug boomed through on the rail. The latter seemed to be going on to victory, but Jew Undertaker came again with a spectacular burst of speed, closing the five-sixteenths in 32 3-4 seconds.

OLD PEOPLE find way to keep breath wholesome
Halitosis (bad breath) quickly yields to Listerine, safe antiseptic and deodorant
Either because of stomach disturbances, food fermentation, or the wearing of false teeth, old people frequently have halitosis (bad breath). No wonder others consider them a nuisance.
But now Science has found that the regular use of Listerine will often overcome offensive mouth odors due to the fermentation of tiny bits of food on mouth, teeth, or dental plate surfaces.
This safe antiseptic and quick deodorant works quickly. It cleanses mouth, teeth, and gum surfaces. Halts fermentation and putrefaction, a major cause of odors, and then counteracts the odors themselves.
Try using Listerine every two or three days, see how much more wholesome it leaves your mouth. How it sweetens your breath. Lambert Pharmacal Co., St. Louis, Mo.

INDIANS HIT FIRST PLACE AFTER A WIN

NEW YORK, April 23.—UP—The Cleveland Indians climbed from third to first place in the American League today as they defeated the former leaders, the Chicago White Sox.

The Indians whipped the Sox 6-0 behind Johnny Allen's seven-hit pitching. Meanwhile the Boston Red Sox, who had occupied second, went to third by dropping a 9-1 decision to the last place Philadelphia Athletics.

The New York Yankees crashed into undisputed possession of fourth place with a 10-6 victory over the Washington Senators, with whom the Yanks had shared that position. In the other American League contest, the world champion Detroit Tigers, whipped by the St. Louis Browns in their last two meetings, came back with a 10-0 triumph.

The National League activity was featured by a pair of extra inning games. The Brooklyn Dodgers whipped the New York Giants 4-3 in an overtime session while the Cincinnati Reds halted the St. Louis Cardinals, 8-6. Standings in the circuit remained unchanged.

The Dodgers scored their first victory of the season over their city rivals when Sid Gautreaux, third string catcher, came through with a pinch single.

JACOB BERMAN LOSES BATTLE; FACES ARREST

SAN FRANCISCO, April 23.—UP—Jacob Berman, the "bright boy" of the Julian oil scandals, awaited further Federal and State action against him tonight following his transfer from Alcatraz prison to county jail.

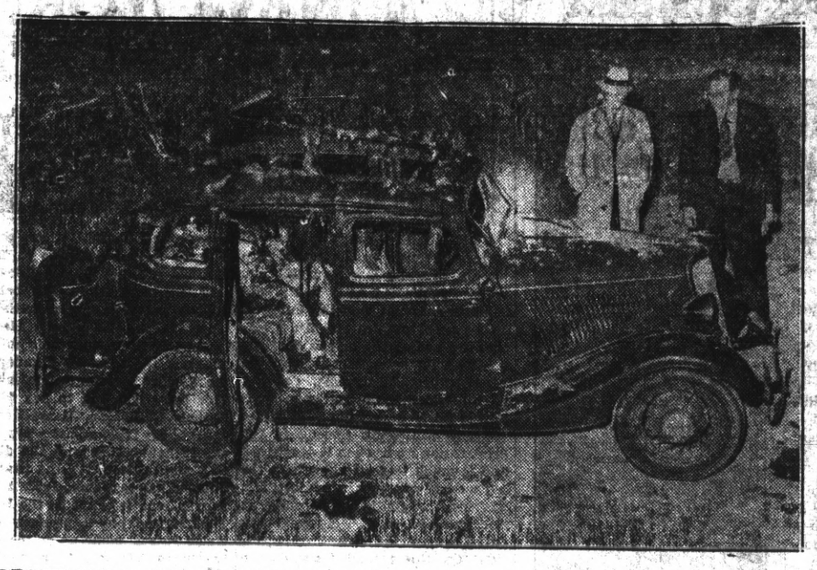

Berman has completed a Federal sentence for his part in the Julian case, but has not paid a $15,000 fine levied at the time of his conviction. He will appear before U. S. Commissioner E. E. Williams during the week, it was indicated.

He has three alternatives. He can pay his fine, sign a pauper's oath or accept an additional Federal sentence in lieu of the fine.

If he is released from Federal custody, however, he will be taken by Los Angeles authorities, who intend to imprison him in San Quentin prison on a State conviction in the same case. He was sentenced in Los Angeles county Superior Court to a one to 10 year grand theft term.

Berman unsuccessfully fought against his release from Federal custody in California. He claimed he had been kidnaped from northeastern Federal penitentiary at Lewisburg, Pa., and had been brought against his will and illegally to Alcatraz. The courts refused to order his return to Lewisburg.

AUXILIARY INITIATION SUCCESSFUL EVENT

Memorial hall has been the setting for many a pleasant event but none surpassed the Legion Auxiliary initiation and social get together held Wednesday evening.

The initiatory team came from Alameda Post No. 9, was headed by Mrs. Mathabat, and gave a wonderful exhibition of drill team work.

Mrs. Mathabat spoke on the Auxiliary preamble and explained the Legion service bill now before Congress, reminding her listeners that the bill is desgned to take the profit out of munitions manufacturing, and thus, largely, out of war.

Mrs. Ethel Flynn of Hayward, department secretary, spoke on child welfare and outlined the whole state project along this line. The program was further enlivened by the interesting discussion of the Auxiliary program by the district president, Mrs. Pearl Smart of Concord, who asked the newly-invited members to take up whatever work on the program seemed best to them and really interest themselves in it.

Those initiated Wednesday evening were Mrs. Clara McNabb, Mrs. Elsie Kretlow, Mrs. Alma Simmons, Mrs. Gertrude Allen, Mrs. Almada Overbey, Mrs. Olga Anderson and Mrs. H. H. McMillan.

Various women's organizations of El Cerrito were represented among them both PTA units, the Ladies Aid of the M. E. Church, the Pocahontas Lodge, and the Business and Professional Women.

Miss Vera Bergman acted as pianist for the drill team giving a very creditable performance.

Refreshments were served downstairs following the close of the meeting.

S. F. Auto Man Kidnaped And Robbed By Pair

SAN FRANCISCO, April 23.—UP—San Francisco police tonight continued to investigate a report that H. O. Christianson, automobile dealer, had been kidnaped, robbed and left stranded in Watsonville.

An hysterical telephone call, Christianson purportedly told authorities two men had entered his place of business on Van Ness avenue and forced him into their car.

They robbed him of $150, he asserted, and threw him out at Watsonville.

Watsonville police, however, reported they knew nothing of the case although Christianson said he had notified the city's department after his escape from the abductors' automobile.

They further indicated they had found no evidence of a robbery in or near the city within the past few days.

Santa Fe Bus Hearing Opens Again In S. F.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 23.—UP—The State Railroad Commission today resumed its hearing on the application of the Santa Fe railroad company for intrastate, coordinated bus and train service in California.

With Commissioner Wallace Ware presiding, C. P. Schnedly, secretary-treasurer of the Cardinal Stage Lines, Kansas subsidiary of the Santa Fe trails system occupied the stand and sought to support the company's proposals for expanded service.

Schnedly was questioned by Earl Bagby, counsel for Greyhound Lines, which, with Southern Pacific Company, is contesting the Santa Fe application on the grounds the plan would entail unnecessary overlapping of transportation facilities in the State.

Santa Fe has proposed to operate an interlocking stage and train service between San Francisco and Los Angeles and in the San Joaquin valley.

Plans Made For Giant Dirigible

AKRON, Ohio, April 23.—UP—Plans for a super dirigible, larger than Germany's new Hindenburg and combining all the construction knowledge learned from the tragedies of the Akron and Macon, are being drawn up by engineers of the Goodyear-Zeppelin company, President Paul W. Litchfield told the United Press tonight in an exclusive interview.

Should the government interest itself in lighter-than-air craft for commercial purposes, especially to join with Germany in trans-Atlantic service, production could be started at the Zeppelin dock here within 24 hours.

It would be the largest lighter-than-air craft ever built, 850 feet in length, 145 in diameter.

The DAILY WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

TRADE MARK REGISTERED

WASHINGTON, April 23—Confidential reports from field agents of the new farm program have been far from encouraging.

From California, for instance, came an account of a meeting of the State AAA Director with country agents, to obtain first-hand information regarding the number of farmers expected to join in the soil conservation plan.

"Now men" said the Director, "you know what this program is; also you have talked to the farmers. I want you each to jot down for me the number of farmers in your area that you are sure will comply."

The answers revealed that out of 170,000 California farmers eligible to participate, only 13,000 were definitely known to plan to take part in the new acreage reduction program.

THE COURT LAUGHED

The black-gowned Justices of the U. S. Supreme Court, so solemn and forbidding on the bench, enjoy a good joke—even at the expense of one of their number.

Arguing a recent tax case before the Court, Robert Jackson, able young Assistant Attorney General, claimed that the defendant had sought to evade the estate tax by transferring his property to relatives prior to his death.

Jackson held that the defendant's advanced years justified such a contention; that he obviously had his demise in mind when he gave away his wealth.

"But," snapped Justice McReynolds, a dour Scotsman, "didn't you read the opinion of the lower court? It is shown there that this man was a hale and hearty Scotsman in his seventies."

"Yes, Your Honor," shot back Jackson, "that is exactly my point. He was a Scotsman. That is why I say he must have desired to transfer his fortune by making 'gifts'."

The entire Court, including McReynolds, broke into laughter.

NOTE—Jackson won the case; the court agreed with his reasoning.

WILY PROSECUTOR

In the Senate, chief credit for the conviction of Judge Halsted L. Ritter is given to Sam Hobbs, a rookie Congressman and former circuit judge from Alabama.

The impeachment charges against the Florida jurist were prosecuted by four members of the House Judiciary Committee, headed by Chairman Hatton W. Sumners. Hobbs, the junior member of the "managers" as they are known officially, was the "trial lawyer."

Illustrative of the fast-thinking Alabaman's methods was the dramatic manner in which he managed to introduce as evidence certain private letters written by the impeached judge. Ritter's lawyers objected strenuously to reading the letters, but were overruled.

Hobbs then began to read one letter. The first several paragraphs were unimportant. Senators sat back in their seats. Suddenly he stopped, stammered, finally said: "I would rather not read the next paragraph. . . ."

Ritter's lawyers leaped to their feet. The entire chamber became tense. "We demand the paragraph be read," the attorneys shouted. "We insist that if part of the letter is read, all of it should be read."

"Very well," said Hobbs, "if you insist." And then, while the entire Senate listened intently, he read as follows: "I can recommend him (Ritter's former law partner very strongly for appointment to the vacancy (a federal judgeship), for as you know he is a Hoover-Democrat. . . ."

Snorts from the Democratic side were so loud they could be heard in the galleries. Among old-line Democrats, traffic with a Hoover-Democrat still is an unforgivable sin.

By his wily maneuver Hobbs had "hung" this damaging bit of evidence on Ritter while appearing to be forced to do so by Ritter's own attorneys.

TALMADGE TRICK

Governor Gene Talmadge may yet be a delegate to the Democratic national convention, even though the buzz-saw-voiced Georgian does not have the courage to enter the presidential preference primary he was recently forced to call. This is so because of an adroit political trick.

The red gallus-wearing Governor controls the Georgia State Central Democratic Committee, through it rules the State's election machinery.

So in drafting the rules for the Georgia presidential primary, he slipped in a provision that any vacancies in the slate of delegates chosen to go to Philadelphia should by filled b ythe chairman of the Central Committee. Even though a complete Roosevelt ticket was elected, it would thus be possible, if a vacancy occurred, for the chairman to name an anti-New Deal substitute.

Almost invariably, last-minute vacancies do occur in delegate lists. When one does, Talmadge could have himself named to the delegation by Hugh Howell, his hand-picked and subservient State Chairman, and thus could go to Philadelphia even though he would court almost certain defeat if he entered the primary.

NOTE—Talmadge's requirement that candidates entering the primary must post a $10,000 fee is something new in American election history. If every state set up such a charge, it would cost a presidential aspirant $480,000 to enter all the primaries.

While crowds cheer the performers, death stalks under the big top and the genial detective, Charlie Chan, solves another three-ring mystery in "Charlie Chan at the Circus," companion feature at the Fox today. NEW YORK INSIDE OUT

By DON O'MALLEY

NEW YORK, April 23—I have it from authorities in the dental profession that the Hartman solution, widely publicized as a dental desensitizer, is not working out well in practical application. An investigating committee of the dentists' society will make its report in the near future. Meanwhile, dentists have found that the Hartman solution is fairly unreliable with adults requires too much fussing in the preparation even when it does work and is much less effective than the old method of novocaine injection. . . Visiting the dentist, apparently, is still going to hurt. . . Harvard men still keep up the downtown tradition. On the second floor of the original Delmonico Building, at Beaver and South William streets, Thomas Lamont, George F. Baker, Howard Whitney, James Roosevelt, G. A. Stillman, Allen Campbell and other Cambridge grads continue to meet—as the Downtown Harvard Luncheon Club—for their mid-day snack. . . . John S. Sumner and the Society for the Suppression of Vice have just had to pay $500 to Nathan Freedman, bookseller, for causing his false arrest a few years ago in connection with the display of a nudist book. It's the first case Sumner has lost since 1932. A lot of people hope it won't be the last. . . That puffed cheek mystery about Helen Hayes' make-up as the elderly Queen Victoria is solved. She uses plain, ordinary cotton wadding. . . . Of course!

CAUGHT—There's quite a romantic story about the way Charlie Correll, and "Andy" of Amos 'n Andy fame, met his charming life, Marie. Under the name of Correll & Gosden, the boys were doing a song and dance act in Chicago movie theaters. Their combined salary—and it wasn't so many years ago, either—was $475 per week.

While playing at McVicker's theater in Chicago's loop Correll was attracted to a pretty miss seated in the front row. She kept smiling at him. He noticed her there daily from that first smile right through their run to the end of the week.

The following week she was down front again at the Tivoli theater. She came almost every performance. It was inevitable that they meet. A movement of Correll's eyes indicated that he'd like to see her around at the stage door. The pretty miss caught the look and understood.

Today, it is legend that the Corrells are one of the happiest and best loved couple in all show business.

REVIVED—Another stage romance is that of Jesse Block and Eve Sully. At the beginning of their association, Block was going around heavy-hearted, nursing a squelched flame for a former partner. Eve Sully, who replaced her, was perturbed about this because Block had become just an automaton in the act. He had no fire—he was acting like a guy who had switched his account to the Bank of United States just before it closed.

In an effort to snap him out of it, Eve began to ad lib during the act. It finally got so that Jesse was laughing with the audience. Her ad lib stuff became the most popular part of the act, and pretty soon they changed their routine to fit. It's their present day routine, and they've been successful with it since.

When Jesse learned to laugh again, he forgot his old love. . . . and a few months later he and Eve were married. They're still one of the happiest couples in radio.

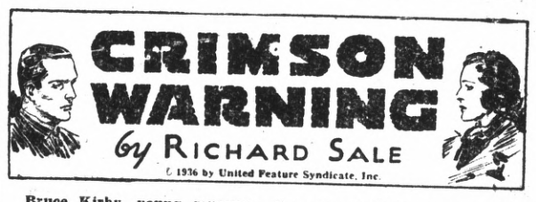

Farm Program Is Approved By U. S. Board

BERKELEY, April 23.—UP—Jonathan Garst, regional director of the Resettlement Administration, announced today he had received Washington approval of the proposed part-time farm program in California.

Money has been allotted, Garst said, for settling 400 families of agricultural laborers on small acreages where they can supplement their seasonal incomes by farming for themselves.

Sites under consideration for the farms include a region near Visalia, Tulare county and in the Yuba-Sutter basin.

CRIMSON WARNING

By RICHARD SALE

© 1936 by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

Bruce Kirby, young museum curator, is urgently summoned to his friend Emery Harding's home on Skeleton Island, off the coast of Maine. Harding has received a note threatening his daughter Audrey unless he hands over a ruby he recently bought from an old sea captain, Albert Santrey. According to the note, it was stolen from a temple in the East Indies. Harding has also summoned Jane Hall, girl detective, to guard Audrey. Other guests in the house are Dr. Straater, Harding's physician; Robert Castian, his lawyer; Dr. Toler, a famous herpetologist; and Frank Bitherbee, Audrey's fiance. Then Santrey is found dead on the beach. The symptoms indicate that he died from the venom of the deadly Caucavel rattler—but that is a tropical snake! He must have been murdered by some one who injected the venom!

CHAPTER VI

"BUT who?" Harding asked. "Who here would do such a thing? These are all friends of mine on the island. My doctor and his wife. Castian and his wife. You, Bruce, and Dr. Toler. Jane Hall. Audrey and Frank. And Madame Leroux—a charming lady. Why, most of you never even spoke two words to Santrey!"

"Yet," said Kirby, "he lies dead." He sighed. "Well, it's a case for the police. I'm afraid. You'd better call them, Emery, and explain what's happened so they can send the coroner. What city is on the coast near here?"

"None," said Harding tremulously. "Elmville is the closest place."

"A town?"

"Barely."

Kirby groaned. "Oh, my lord! Perhaps we'd better wait until morning. How far is Portland?"

"Fifty-three miles."

"Um. Pretty good distance for a night trip." Kirby turned to Dr. Straater. "What do you think, Doctor?"

Dr. Straater pursed his lips.

"I think," he said at length, "we had better telephone Portland and tell them what has happened. After that, it's up to them. If they want to come down tonight to hold an inquest—"

"Good lord!" said Harding shrilly, his taut nerves snapping. "How can you talk so coolly of police and inquests? If Santrey was murdered, then there's a killer loose on Skeleton Island! A killer loose. . . ." He let the words trail off. He looked at Kirby with horror in his eyes. "Bruce—the letter. You remember what the letter said."

"TAKE it easy, Emery," said Kirby gently. "No use getting upset. I'm certain Santrey's death has nothing whatsoever to do with the letter. Now sit down and get hold of yourself."

"What letter?" Castian asked.

"That," Kirby said drily, "is none of your business."

"I think it is!" said Castian hotly. "A man's been killed! And if Emery has received a letter full of threats, we should all know about it. Furthermore, Kirby, I don't care for your tone!"

"I'm sorry," said Kirby evenly. "Look here, there's no sense in quarreling about this. Let's keep our heads." He turned to Harding. "Do you want the letter made public yet, Emery?"

"No," said Harding. "I do not."

Kirby looked at Castian and shrugged.

"Well, if that's how you feel, Emery. . . ." Castian grumbled.

"That's how I feel." Harding said nervously. "It's my letter, and Kirby says it has nothing to do with this. . . . Dr. Straater, will you call the Portland police?"

"I," said Kirby, "am going down to the beach again."

In the uncertain glare of the match, they studied the footprints.

HE STALKED out of the library, went out the front door, and crossed the lawn to the beach. Carefully, he avoided making new footprints in the sand. He followed the path that had been trod before.

Suddenly some one called to him from the lawn. He turned and waited. Frank Bitherbee caught up with him.

"Mr. Harding told me you had come down here. He thought I'd better come along."

"Doesn't he trust me?" Kirby asked, smiling faintly.

Bitherbee laughed. "Implicitly! But he was worried about your safety. He wanted me to act as a strong-arm man. I say, Mr. Kirby, what the devil's wrong up there? What happened? When I came back to the library, they were all standing around looking scared."

"Santrey was murdered," Kirby said, as they reached the beached rowboat, which was close to the depression in the sand where Santrey's body had lain.

"Murdered!" said Bitherbee. "But that's preposterous! Santrey was an old duck who wouldn't have hurt a fly. Besides . . . well, there's no one on this island other than our party. And we have no murderers amongst us!" He looked sharply at Kirby. "You're not joking?"

"Hardly! But what you say may be true. It isn't likely that there is a murderer amongst us. But this island—how large is it?"

"Oh, about three miles around."

"You see—big enough to hold some one else who might have come over from the mainland to do away with Santrey."

"But in that case—"

"IN THAT case, we may never know who did it." Kirby smiled. "No harm in trying to find out, though. Look here." He squatted on his heels and let his finger play over some footsteps visible in the moonlight on the other side of the rowboat. "These steps weren't made by our party before. We came from the house. These come from up the cove, around the shore line. Castian was the only one of us who came that way. And he didn't go back. These steps come from the cove and go back towards it again."

"Let's see," said Bitherbee. "I'll light a match."

He did so. Clearly now, in the uncertain glare of the flame, they could see the footprints in the sand. The right foot dug much deeper than the left. In fact, the left was almost indiscernible, the mere tip of the toe being visible.

"Strange," Kirby muttered.

"You know what that looks like?" Bitherbee hasarded, in his clear young voice. "It looks as though a lame man had made them."

"A lame man!" Kirby said. "Exactly! That's it!"

His mind flashed back to the library—to the grim group that had stood around the corpse on the sofa. . . .

Dr. Herman Toler was a lame man.

B. P. W. CLUB CONVENTION AT CORONADO

Business and professional women, now numbering 60,000 in the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, will meet in convention in each State during the next three months, and take up such vital issues as economic freedom for women and the removal of discriminations against women.

The Federation, whose president is Miss Charl Ormond Williams of Washington, D. C., has 1500 affiliated clubs, and is expected to have the highest membership in its history when the national board convenes in Chicago, July 12-18.

Dean M. Beatrice Olson, chairman of the program committee of the National Federation, will be a convention speaker.

One of the features of the convention will be membership reports. Because the Federation feels that the economic freedom of American women is in jeopardy, and that it is only through the co-operation of a large, intelligent and articulate body of women that the discriminations against women in businesses and professions can be effectively combatted, the Federation is actively supporting H. R. 5051. If passed this bill will tend to remove the discrimination caused by Section 213 A of the Economy Act.

At the State convention reports will also be made by the Education Committee on the work done for girls in the State. HOLLYWOOD, April 23.—UP—One of the top-flight "killers" of the screen is worried over traffic fatalities.

He is J. Carrol Naish, who kills without hesitation before the cameras. A traffic fatality merely was a story in the newspaper until recently Naish witnessed an accident. Two automobiles crashed. He rushed to the scene and found one of the victims was a friend.

"A few days later," he says, "I happened to see some statistics on the highway accident toll. It seemed absolutely fantastic to me that we Americans continue to accept such wholesale murder on the streets without demanding an immediate halt."

Naish did his bit. He wrote to President Roosevelt and suggested a plan for making motoring safe.

"My plan," he explains, "is not original nor is it an entire solution of the problem. But I feel that it is a step that must be taken."

The "movie killer" suggests federal legislation to limit top speed of automobiles at 40 miles an hour. Emergency vehicles such as police cars would be allowed greater speed.

"To attempt such a vast project, which would include placing governors on all automobiles now in use to reduce their speed to the permitted maximum, would be a job for the Federal government," Naish says.

"States, individually, could make no concerted progress through their legislatures, and "forty miles an hour is fast enough for any purpose. Speed causes most accidents. And speed is like a fatal drug; the more you get, the more you want."

Townsend Club To Stage Whist Party

King Of L. A. Underworld To Get Long Term

SAN RAFAEL, April 23.—UP—Marco Alborl, once the uncrowned "king of the underworld in Los Angeles," charged today that officials of San Quentin prison changed his sentences so that they ran consecutively instead of concurrently.

Alborl made these charges when he filed petition in the Marin County Superior Court for a writ of mandate to compel Court Smith, warden of San Quentin prison, to submit his name to the State board of prison terms and paroles. He contended that his term has expired and he should be eligible for release.

Alborl was sentenced to San Quentin when convicted on two counts of assault with intent to commit murder. The parole board granted him one parole April 26, 1933 and he contended today that he should be freed from another parole. His sentences, if served concurrently, would have expired June 20, 1934.

TULAREMIA

The district of Tulare has the honor of having a disease named for it. The disease is tularemia, first described in Tulare, California, and is an acute, infectious disorder. In the beginning it was supposed that the disease was limited to the Western states, but with a better recognition of it, it has been found that tularemia occurs in almost all of the states in the Union. Evidently the disease is spreading rapidly and may be expected to increase.

The infectious organism is the bacterium tularense, which is frequently found in rodents, or gnawing animals, particularly in rabbits and squirrels. It may be transmitted to man by the handling of the skins of infected animals. The disease is easily transmitted from animal through the bite of the tick, the deer-fly, the squirrel flea, and other insects, most cases occurring in humans are picked up from rabbits infected with the disease, although in the Western states, the disease is quite often found in men whose work takes them out where they are likely to be bitten by ticks. An interesting thing to know about tularemia is that research workers in laboratories who are working with the causative organism easily develop the disease, regardless of how carefully they try to protect themselves.

Prevention of the disease depends upon warning the occasional hunter to avoid handling any rabbit which seems to be slow in getting away. The healthy rabbit will do his best to escape, whereas the rabbit sick with tularemia appears to be sluggish and slow. The hunter should be warned to leave the slow rabbit severely alone, even though the amateur may be tempted to handle it, since he is such a poor shot that it is probably the only rabbit he can bring in. The wearing of rubber gloves by those who handle the skins or meat of rabbits for the markets will help to prevent the spread of the disease to humans.

As a general rule, the disease appears about 3 days after exposure, and the patient has a sharp chill, followed by fever. The muscles of the thighs and back are painful and the head aches. Usually, the primary lesion is located on the hand, occurring either on the thumb or fingers. The neighboring lymph nodes are greatly swollen, and those most enlarged are the ones closest to the original site of infection. Evidently the infection is carried by way of the lymphatic vessels, for other lymph nodes will also enlarge, such as the nodes in the arm, or along the side of the neck. The enlargement of the nodes occurs very rapidly and quite often, reddish-purple lines are visible under the skin. The presence of such lines means that the lymph channels near the surface have become inflamed.

Although recovery from tularemia is the rule, nevertheless the patient may feel greatly depressed both physically and mentally for many weeks afterward and the former feeling of well-being may not return for some time.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

(Rubber Cause of Skin Irritation?)

Question: Mr. F. H. writes: "Have you any record of rubber causing a skin irritation? I have an inflammation on my hands only after wearing rubber gloves."

Answer: A skin irritation such as you describe occasionally follows when rubber comes in contact with the skin surface; however, most people are not susceptible to a dermatitis of this sort. The eruption results only when the individual is sensitive to some of the chemicals used in the manufacture of rubber. Fortunately, such sensitivity is exceedingly rare.

(Mineral Oil)

Question: Mr. John V. asks: "What is your opinion of mineral oil? Is this correctly considered a laxative? Is it safe to take?"

Answer: Mineral oil is widely used for the relief of constipation, acting as a lubricant; however, it is not considered a laxative in the ordinary meaning of that term. It is safe and its action is gentle. It is usually given by mouth; however, I find that in some cases oral administration will bring about an interference with digestion due to the fact that the oil will form a coating on the inner surface of the small intestine, where it may interfere with the absorption of food. When I believe that the patient will benefit from mineral oil, I usually advise that it be used in the form of an oil retention enema, the warm oil being injected and allowed to remain overnight. In this way the full benefit of its lubricating quality is secured in the lower part of the large intestine, exactly where it is most desirable, and at the same time the oil is not present in the small intestine. It is well to remember that the preparation used must vary to suit the individual case; some patients will be benefited to a marked degree from mineral oil preparations; others will benefit from agar-agar or psyllium seed. It is impossible to choose arbitrarily any one preparation which will work equally well in all cases.

YOUR GOOD HEALTH

Changes in Temperature Are Chiefly to Blame For Causing Chilblains

By CLAUD NORTH CHRISMAN, M.D.

YEARS ago when we youngsters of various ages all sat in one school room the winter time, especially snowy weather, found the room usually over-warm. We wore heavy shoes, or boots, and thick wool stockings. We started to school early because we wanted time to play, to throw snow-balls, to slide and to build things out of snow.

Wasn't it real fun? Then when the bell rang we tumbled pell mell into that hot schoolroom, scuffled to our seats, and were suddenly quiet. Presently the pairs of heavy footwear would begin to move restlessly, and before long, some of us would be trying to scratch our heels on the desk supports while we kept a wary eye on the teacher.

Recess came after a long while and we dashed back to our play in the snow. This experience repeated itself throughout the day. When we were finally back in our homes at night and took our thick shoes and stockings off we found our feet, especially the heels and outer edges, red and puffy. How they did itch! It makes me rub my feet around just to remember it.

And the process went on the next day and the next, alternating cold feet and too much heat.

Many Had Chilblains

I never heard of chilblain in those early days, but I know that a lot of us youngsters never saw a comfortable evening during snowy weather. We played too hard those days to mind, but night often brought misery and tears. The word "chilblain" literally means a frost boil, and one of them need not be bigger than a dime to hurt like the very dickens.

They vary in size from the very small ones to the common size of a dollar, and sometimes by coalescence cover the whole rim of the heel. They occasionally come on the outer edge of the foot and even on the hands or face, but they are most frequent on the heels.

The source of the trouble seems to lie in the effect which sudden changes of temperatures have upon the capillaries of the skin. They develop a phase of paralysis, lose their tone, and become chronically distended.

The condition of the tissues is one which seems to invite inflammation, and the first bit of exposure starts the trouble. First you feel a prickling, then a burning which pierces deeper and deeper. Any attempt to rub or scratch means additional swelling and the itching grows more unbearable.

There are some local applications that give relief. Very cold water or snow, or very hot water are at least comforting. A salve containing boric acid, or some form of tannin, camphorated oil, or an iodine preparation will give a degree of relief.

Iodine Is Useful

Iodine is our most dependable remedy for local application. If combined with glycerine, it can be applied freely and repeatedly without injury to the skin. Sometimes a bandage or dressing to give a moderate pressure will be a help.

However, shoes that are too tight or especially too short should never be worn. Nothing must interfere with the flow of blood to the afflicted parts. The feet must be kept dry and be dressed in comfort, which recalls the fact that some chilblain sufferers cannot wear rubbers for protection from wet because of the tendency to heat and draw.

The likelihood to chilblains is sometimes, if not usually, due to some systemic condition. It could be rheumatic or anemic or circulatory, and must be treated accordingly. If the affection extends into the second degree there might be ulceration and pus.

In this case, strict antiseptic measures must be followed to avoid infection. Where children wear long stockings be sure there are no tight garters to impede circulation.

Preventing Childbirth Deaths

Mother's Day has taken on added significance during these past few years because of the movement to bring to the attention of the Nation the needless waste of life of mothers in childbirth and to develop better maternity care.

A special effort is being launched through the Maternity Center Association with the keynote: Early and Adequate Care Reduces the Risks of Motherhood: Father plays a Leading Role

If these deaths are preventable, how, then, can they be prevented? It boils down to a six-fold program:

1. A complete medical examination early in pregnancy.
2. Regular and frequent medical supervision of prospective mothers.
3. An aseptic delivery under the supervision of an obstetrician.
4. Supervision, care and instruction until the mother is able to resume her work.
5. Examination of the mother at six weeks, three months, six months and one year after the baby is born.
6. Arrangements for continuous medical supervision of the baby.

Profiles For Today

Gene Venzke Turns The Tables

By TALBOT LAKE

ONE of the most amazing comebacks of recent years has been that of Gene Venzke, the University of Pennsylvania runner, who has at last found himself able to beat his cinder track nemesis, Glenn Cunningham, the Kansas cyclone. Four years ago, before Venzke had even entered college, he was touted as the speedster who would set new world's records that might stand for all time. The truth of the matter is that Venzke, during that period, did set at least one world's record, but because he was running in a time that boasted of such world-beaters as Cunningham, Bill Bonthron, of Princeton, and Jock Lovelock, of Oxford, he was somewhat overshadowed.

In his recent races against Cunningham this running stylist has demonstrated his early advance notices were not overdone. There is no doubt left now that Venzke belongs among the best runners of all time. Cunningham said recently about their last race that it wouldn't have made any difference whether he had gone fast or slow. Venzke would have beaten him any how.

Young Gene epitomizes the popular idea of a perfect runner. His stride is long, loose, and not too hurried. Cunningham, for instance, appears to be giving his last ounce of energy when he rounds the last turn in the mile race, but Venzke never shows the strain. Evidently, during the past two months there hasn't been any strain.

Venzke comes from Pottstown, Pa., and that is the location of the Hill School, where he schooled. He had always intended going to the University of Pennsylvania and to do his running under the watchful eye of Lawson Robertson, the veteran track coach who has trained several Olympic teams. Because of the stringent nature of his track activities Gene had had to confine his athletics to one sport, but there is a hankering in his heart whenever the football season rolls around; he'd like to be a halfback.

Over Thirty

There is nothing "in-between" where an older woman is concerned. She is either handsome and smart or just plain dowdy. If she belongs in the second classification it is her own fault. Every woman past thirty should realize she must pay extra attention to the details of her grooming.

YOUNGISH

Navy diagonal wool is used for this suit with the four-button jacket. Bright plaid taffeta makes the short-sleeve blouse with smart ruff-collar.

Guide to Charm

Fashion Now Recommends Fuller Figure

By JACQUELINE HUNT

NOTHING makes a woman so figure conscious as her first spring shopping jaunt. And, judging from the many letters I receive, women are more concerned about their busts than any other part of the body this spring.

For years women wanted a flat, boyish figure, so busts were concealed under tight brassieres and shapeless dresses. But now fashion demands rounded contours. You must have breasts that are firm, widely divided, and up-rounded if you want your figure to be considered attractive.

"How can I develop my bust?" or "How can I make a drooping bust more firm and shapely?" you want to know.

First you should understand there is no simple means by which you can develop full, rounded breasts overnight if they naturally tend to be small. But you can improve the bustline decidedly by developing the pectoral muscles which run from the breast-bone to the shoulders and by strengthening the muscles of the neck and upper back.

MISS HUNT

Hold the chest high and well-rounded at all times. Practice good posture and deep-breathing constantly. The following exercises develop the necessary muscles and encourage deep breathing.

1. Lie down on a rug or folded quilt with your arms outstretched easily and naturally. Now, inhaling, lift the chest and shoulders off the mat, supporting your weight on the back of your head. Hold your breath a second, then lower the shoulders to the mat. Repeat five to ten times.

2. Roll over and standing on your hands and knees on the mat, fingers pointing inward. Now resisting with your arms, bend your torso forward and down until your chest nearly touches the floor. Repeat five times, rest for a minute and repeat again. It is the resistance that strengthens the arm and chest muscles.

3. Stand straight with your feet about 16 inches apart. Raise the arms to shoulder level, bend at the elbow and place the doubled up fist of one hand in the palm of the other. Now resisting as much as you can, push the arms first to one side and then the other. Repeat this exercise until you are tired. It is an excellent one for getting at those weak chest muscles.

Sports such as swimming, golfing and tennis are also splendid exercises for developing—or reducing—the bust.

Remember to wear well-fitted brassieres. They should always be of the uplift type. Any other kind will cause the muscles to stretch and become weakened. Young girls should go without brassieres as long as possible. When they are needed they should be selected carefully to give the right support without binding.

Beauty Tips

QUESTION: "I would like to have my eyes look nice and clear. They are bloodshot and yellowish a good part of the time. I wear glasses which two oculists have told me are properly fitted, so I cannot understand what causes the trouble. Can you tell me how to improve their appearance?

—Troubled."

Even properly fitted glasses cannot protect your eyes against continual strain or disease. If the inflamed condition of your eyes is not of too long standing it may be cleared up with an ointment of yellow oxide of mercury. Apply along the rim of your lids with a toothpick or orange stick tipped with sterile cotton. This is a safe preparation, since it is used in the eyes of tiny babies. However, if there isn't immediate improvement in the condition of your eyes, you should consult a medical eye doctor—not an eyeglass fitter.

Scholarship, True and False

"The possession of a doctorate or of the multiplication of trivial publications," writes Dr. Walter A. Jessup, president of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching, "has tended to blind those who are responsible for selecting, promoting, and making comfortable the teaching staff (of our colleges and universities) to the fact that personality is still an indispensable element in an institution's effectiveness. Standardizing associations meant well in their pressure on colleges to increase the number of doctors on their staff. This has resulted all too frequently in an accumulation of colorless, superficial scholars who were quick to recognize that the likeliest road to promotion lay in the direction of 'publication'."

Knitting Lengthwise

Two colors of soft zephyr yarn are used for the shell stitch crocheted blouse which tops a plain knitted skirt. The unusual pattern of the blouse is achieved by working lengthwise rather than horizontally. The scarf matches the skirt.

Lace Dresses from Paris Favor the Unusual Design

By IRENE VAIL

New York — Quantities of lace dresses, all in unusual patterns, come from Ardanse, of Paris. Worked into these designs are such unusual motifs as surgical scissors or coins. They are apparently pleasing, and other patterns are inspired by the map of Paris, while white mice, lottery tickets and restaurant names are other motifs worked into the designs. The majority of the laces are in fine silk types and several are accompanied by matching shawls. Some of these lace dresses are in tailored styles, but most of them are in vaporous feminine creations which are typical of Ardanse. The newest silhouettes are in tunic treatments, these often split near the border, while the hemline of the skirts also continue to introduce splits or slashes which show the legs as the mannequin walks. A charming innovation at this opening are the dresses of perfume fabrics which give off scents as the mannequins pass by.

The effort to establish the knitted dress in formal style groupings is again apparent in Paris dressmaker showings. By far the most pretentious gesture in this connection is the wedding dress and veil, presented by Anny Blatt at her recent showing, the climax of a series of late afternoon dinner costumes, all in hand-knitting.

Chinese colors, in the vivid tones, are apparent in greens, some reds, and bright yellows variously described as jonquil, tulip and canary. Blues, particularly in the flower violet-cast shades, are numerous. The use of shantung is another reflection of Chinese inspiration, adopted for both woolen and silk weaves. Cottons and linens are prominent — in dresses, suits and blouses.

Direct reports of blouses in the Paris collections are many and interesting this season. Silhouette influences that will affect the blouses are important. Fabrics supply some of the most exciting news of all, and this applies to blouses as well as other costume types. Tricks in the way of door knocker fasteners and painted China buttons and drawer handles on pockets should find charming application to blouses. Color is imaginative and contrasts are often decided, as a peacock green blouse with raspberry belt worn with a third color in the suit. There is talk of squared shoulders in Creed's blouses and in the Chinese pagodas of Mainbocher. Some necklines are higher and there is indication of ruffs that stand up toward the chin, very flattering. Dinner suits continue to be sponsored. Pleated chiffon blouses, which have been promoted here and there, but have a promising future, are used again and make a nice contradiction with linen pajamas in the Rochas collection. Chief silhouette influences to note would appear to be these: the peplum, tunics, boleros, narrow skirts.

Modes and Manners

QUESTION: "Is it necessary to have menu cards on the table at a formal dinner at home?

—Mrs. C. D. F."

ANSWER: Not unless the occasion for the dinner is a special one, such as an engagement dinner or a wedding anniversary. And then only if one wishes to have them. These are usually intended as souvenirs for the guests. For the average formal dinner at home, however, menu cards are superfluous and not in the best of taste.

Baking Adds Thrill to Day Of Housewife

By JUDITH WILSON

WHAT a thrill it is to turn out perfect cakes, muffins, and other quick hot breads. Yet lots of women miss out because they lack confidence due to a failure or two. Or else they feel there is some mystery about successful baking. Of course, there isn't! The only mystery is good ingredients and accurate measuring, and any woman can delight her family with unusual things from her own oven.

Apple Muffins

Sift pastry flour and measure 2¼ cups. Resift with 2¼ teaspoons baking powder, ½ teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon cinnamon and ¼ teaspoon nutmeg. Cream 4 tablespoons shortening and ½ cup sugar. Stir in a well-beaten egg and then the flour mixture alternately with 1 cup milk. Fold in 1 cup finely chopped, pared and cored apples. Fill greased muffin pans 2/3 full and sprinkle the top of the batter with sugar mixed with a little cinnamon and nutmeg. Bake in a hot oven 20 to 25 minutes. This makes 20 large muffins.

Spoon Bread

Scald 2 cups of white corn meal with 2 cups boiling water. Stir until smooth, cool slightly and add 1 tablespoon sugar, ½ teaspoon salt, 2 teaspoons baking powder and 3 eggs beaten together until light. Add milk enough to make a rather thin pouring batter, about 1½ to 2 cups. Pour into a greased casserole with 2 tablespoons melted fat. Bake 40 minutes in a moderate oven and serve very hot in the dish in which it was baked.

Peanut Butter Biscuits

Mix and sift 2 cups flour, 2 teaspoons combination type baking powder, ¾ teaspoon salt. Cut in 4 tablespoons shortening and 8 tablespoons peanut butter. Add 2/3 cup milk and mix well. Drop by spoonfuls onto a greased baking sheet and bake in a hot oven 15 minutes, brushing with melted butter during baking.

Dutch Apple Cake

Sift and measure 2 cups flour. Resift with ½ teaspoon salt, 3 teaspoons baking powder and ½ cup sugar. Cut in ¼ cup shortening. Combine 1 beaten egg, 2/3 cups milk and 1 teaspoon vanilla and add to the dry mixture, blending thoroughly. Spread in a shallow pan. Peel, core and cut into thin wedges 3 or 4 apples. Press these segments in overlapping rows into the dough. Dot the top with small bits of butter, sprinkle with ½ cup light brown sugar that has been mixed with 1 teaspoon cinnamon.

Fruit Bread

Sift and measure 1½ cups flour; resift with 3 teaspoons baking powder, ½ cup sugar, 1 teaspoon salt. Combine ½ cup broken nut meats, ½ cup candied orange peel, thinly sliced and 1½ cups graham flour and add to the first mixture. Beat 1 egg and add to 1½ cups milk. Add to the flour mixture and stir only until smooth. Bake in a greased loaf pan in a moderate oven for 1 hour.

Banana Muffins

Mix and sift 1 cup flour, ½ teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon baking powder, ¼ teaspoon soda and 2 tablespoons sugar. Mix 1 egg, well-beaten with 2 tablespoons sour milk, 2 tablespoons melted shortening, and 1 cup sliced bananas. Stir until the pieces of banana are broken up and combine with the dry mixture. Stir only enough to dampen all the flour. Bake in well-greased muffin pans in a hot oven 30-35 minutes.

'AN OLD-TIME FAVORITE

BREAD PUDDING—Break stale bread into pieces the desired size, and to this add 3 cups of milk and a cup of sugar into which about a teaspoon of salt has been added, 3 eggs and 1 teaspoon vanilla or other flavoring and 1 teaspoon lemon slightly beaten.

Place bread in greased baking dish and pour over the milk and other ingredients and bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) for about an hour or until pudding is firm. The dish should be set in a pan of hot water, and the top of the pudding, when finished, should be a delicate brown.

MODERN WOMEN

Husband May Forgive Errant Wife, But He Seldom Forgets

By MARIAN MAYS MARTIN

JUST as one may pay too much for merchandise, one may pay too much for experience. Women are finding this out. They are also discovering that one pays a stiff price for what passes for independence, and is really not that at all.

Confessions are in the air, most of them anonymous. The story of a woman's life, the more checkered the better, seems to be regarded as good copy. These human documents serve as fearful examples to other women. Or do they? Naturally they have to show the disadvantages of straying from the straight and narrow path. Most stories do convey the idea such detours invariably are dangerous, and rarely, if ever, worth while.

MRS. MARTIN

Husbands and wives must be reckoned with. Their reactions must be taken into account. Men have a perfectly natural prejudice and personal distaste for wives who stray out of bounds. I disagree with a woman writer who refers to such prejudices on the part of a husband as "his small-boy feelings" and who wonders "whether she is giving too much credit to Mr. Average Man for common sense and justice," when she says, in speaking of a specific case, "So far as I can see, she hasn't lost everything yet. If her marriage has real integrity and if her husband is as fine a man as she believes him to be, he will get over his small-boy feelings, and they will discover the depth and breadth of marriage."

Can't Forget Them

Husbands have forgiven their wives indiscretions, but I very much doubt if they have been able to really forget them. Besides, it would seem highly unreasonable for the average wife to assume she should or would be forgiven. "Small-boy feelings" seems rather an under-statement, don't you think?

When men and women marry they have a right to expect consideration and fair play. That they don't always get it is beside the point. They still have a right to expect it and to register something more than childish disappointment when they are betrayed. It is also their right to accept or reject the situation. If a husband is noble enough, or indifferent enough, to be complacent that is distinctly his affair. I most certainly do not think his wife has the right to assume what she does is right because she chooses to do it and that her husband simply has to stand for it.

I do not believe this any more than I think it is a wife's duty to forgive or smash her marriage to smithereens because of anything her husband may do. Her reactions are purely personal; her decision should be entirely her own.

I think the time has gone by when husbands feel they can count on forgiveness or expect their wives to make the best of a very bad bargain by sticking to it.

Leave Him in Doubt

What is more, I think it is tremendously good for the male animal to be left in doubt as to what course the female will take, how she will regard any off-side plays he may make. When she takes his misconduct very much to heart it seems a decided under-statement of fact to call her attitude childish—or small-girl. Men and women are expected to have control over their feelings, but they are, I think, entitled to have feelings. Most of us have.

Marriage has a good deal in common with Humpty Dumpty. It's pretty hard to put them together again once they have been shattered by the crash of circumstances. Courageous couples often make a try at picking up the pieces. But time proven how much more fragile the mended article really is.

If one is born with an urge to have a fling at love and life the only wise course to pursue is to have a fling before marriage. Afterward the damage done is usually out of all proportion to the fun.

The damage may be to one's mate rather more than to one's self, but, after all, the damage done to others is the most difficult to repair.

It's a far cry from expecting perfection to fair play. Even in these days of tremendous personal freedom I still think husbands and wives have a grown-up, not a small child's, sense of hurt when they are betrayed.

You and Your Child

Baby Talk Keeps Child Infantile

By JANE HERBERT GOWARD

MOTHER'S hands and feet began to get cold from standing around while little Billy took his airing. "Let's play a game of tag," she suggested. "I'll run and you must try to catch me." The youngster agreed. "Alwight," he said, substituting the "w" sound for "r." "Alwight, Billy," mother mimicked. "Ready. Set. Go!" Mother ran a few feet and looked back to see how near to getting tagged she was, but Billy who did not quite understand the game, had started off in the opposite direction. "Come back," mother called. "You must try to catch me. You must run after me." All the joy of discovery was in the youngster's face as he said, "Billy wun after," and pointed to his mother. "That's it, Billy. Here I go. Now, wun!"

MRS. GOWARD

In addition to using the letter sound "w" for "r," Billy frequently substitutes "t" for the "k" sound. When he wishes to be carried, it is "Tarry me." He says tandy for candy and tar for car. And his mother, from a desire no doubt to speak the child's language and make herself understood, gives the same names to thing as he does, mistakes and all. As a result, and without realizing it, the habit of addressing her child in baby talk is growing on her.

Billy's use of baby talk is pardonable. He may find it easier to make the substitute sounds. (This, of course, is no excuse for encouraging him to continue using them.) Or he may be expressing the desire to remain a baby in resorting to baby talk. Babies are loved and pampered, and being helpless, freed of responsibility. And mothers are taken in by baby talk, it being proof of the child's dependence, and so appealing.

A mother should not allow herself to go down to the child's level in speech. After all, she is supposed to be teaching him his mother tongue. If he says "wun" for "run" or "tar" for "car" she should correct him. A child likes to be admired. Why not admire him for wanting to grow up in his speech instead of wanting to remain infantile?

Don't Take Pills For Constipation

Ordinary pills taken to relieve constipation merely force a movement of the bowels without making the liver disgorge its excess bile. That's why the trouble returns in a day or two and you have to swallow more pills.

What every constipated person needs is a good liver tonic like Plantlax to thoroughly cleanse the digestive system of all foul secretions and at the same time restore the torpid, lazy liver to proper working order. When this is done you will no longer have frequent headaches, coated tongue, sallow skin, sour stomach, gas, bilious attacks or other symptoms of constipation and liver trouble.

Plantlax is made from the juices of harmless medicinal plants — Nature's own remedies—that act in a mild, easy way without weakening or irritating the organs. Try it tonight. Large bottle $1 at any good drug store.

Laxatives are only makeshifts. A mere bowel movement doesn't get at the cause. SHE LOST 20 POUNDS OF FAT

Feel full of pep and possess the slender form you crave—you can't if you listen to gossipers.

To take off excess fat go light on fatty meats, butter, cream and sugary sweets—eat more fruit and vegetables and take a half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water every morning to eliminate excess waste.

Mrs. Elma Verille of Havre de Grace, Md., writes: "I took off 20 lbs.—my clothes fit me fine now."

No drastic cathartics—no constipation—but blissful daily bowel action when you take your little daily dose of Kruschen.

IT'S SIMPLY INEXCUSABLE

You cannot expect to make friends socially or in business if you have halitosis (bad breath). Since you cannot detect it yourself, the one way of making sure you do not offend is to gargle often with Listerine. It instantly destroys odors, improves mouth hygiene and checks infection. P. R. MILNES torney in Douglas, but now a federal judge. Sames, a man of very abbreviated stature, had to stand on the seat of a chair to be heard when announcing the vote of Arizona. After several fruitless days of balloting the scene began to change and it was apparent on each succeeding roll call that Harding was gaining strength. Persuasion was used on Sames to get him to change the vote of the delegation to the Ohio Senator but he obdurately refused. He was told that his man was out of the race and that to demonstrate the fact he would be told the number of votes each candidate would receive in the succeeding ballot, even to a half vote. Sames refused to budge but the ballot demonstrated the truth of what he had been told even to the last ballot.

Then the final roll call came with Arizona still voting for Mayor General Wood. As the alphabet of the States progressed the break came and pandemonium reigned with delegations frantically trying to change their votes and get on the bandwagon. In the midst of the tumult and shouting Sames mounted his chair and announced a change in the vote of the Arizona delegation from Wood to Harding.

"To hell with Arizona," cried Harry Daughtery, later U. S. attorney general, "we don't want or need Arizona."

AFTER-EFFECTS

I was a witness of the after-effects of the stand of the Arizona-pledged delegation. When it came time for the passing out of the patronage, following the election of Harding, the General Wood men received no consideration or appointments. Daughtery had a long memory and he never forgave the members of the edelegation for not coming into the fold when they had the opportunity. Perhaps the patronage viewpoint is a sordid one, but let's be frank and honest about it and admit that in politics it cuts a great deal of ice.

SHOULD BE FREE

No fettered, hogtied delegation can be effective and efficient in a national political convention, but the uninstructed delegation on the other hand is free to exercise its judgment as the many exigencies that arise in such gatherings call for.

Personally I am for the uninstructed delegation as a matter of principle, expediency and good politics, and therefore I am going to vote for the Warren list of 44 delegates. I am more strongly for that slate, perhaps than I otherwise would be because of the unholy alliance between William Randolph Hearst and Governor Frank Merriam. In case of the publisher he is an avowed Democrat and has no business sticking his nose in our party affairs. On the other hand I would be against the slate because Merriam is a party to it, and if there ever was a misfit in the gubernatorial chair he is it. The combination does not sound or smell good to me, and for one I am not going to be led around by the nose politically by this precious duo. And in the feeling I entertain I have the company of several hundred thousand of other Republicans in this State, so I will not be conspicuous by playing a lone hand.

TAKE YOUR CHOICE

If the Republicans of this State want Merriam and Hearst as dictators then they can vote that slate; if they, on the other hand believe in clean leadership and political freedom they will and must vote for the ticket headed by Earl Warren.

I regret it very much but it seems that Governor Landon in his campaign for delegates in this State in allying himself with Hearst and Merriam has made the same mistake as poor old Tray, and is being condemned for being found in bad company.

AGED MAN IS HELD; MUM ON CHARGES

asked him if anything was wrong.

DREW GUN

Gattuccio replied there was nothing wrong, that he merely had stopped to get out his camera and take a picture of Voss, who was approaching slowly in a 'carry-all' wagon drawn by two donkeys.

Before Gattuccio could take the picture, Shea said, Voss suddenly and without warning drew out an old-fashioned single shot shot-gun and fired at close range as his wagon passed by Gattuccio's car.

KEEPS MUM

Shea and Frank Marty Jr., both of whom were en route to San Jose from Hollister, rushed Gattuccio to a doctor and took Voss into custody today.

Under persistent questioning at county jail, Voss refused to talk or admit his identity. Officers said they would withhold charges pending outcome of Gattuccio's condition.

5 INDICTED IN WENDEL CASE PROBE

New York City and taken to a house in Sheepshead Bay where, at the point of a pistol, he was forced to confess he murdered the Lindbergh baby. Subsequently, he said, he was taken to New Jersey and forced to sign another confession, also under duress.

REFUSED INDICTMENT

Wendel said he was confined in the New Lisbon colony for the feeble minded in New Jersey and that the elder Parker was the man who placed him there. A week before Hauptmann was executed Parker took Wendel to Trenton and turned him over to Mercer county authorities. The Mercer county grand jury immediately began an investigation which delayed Hauptmann's execution three days.

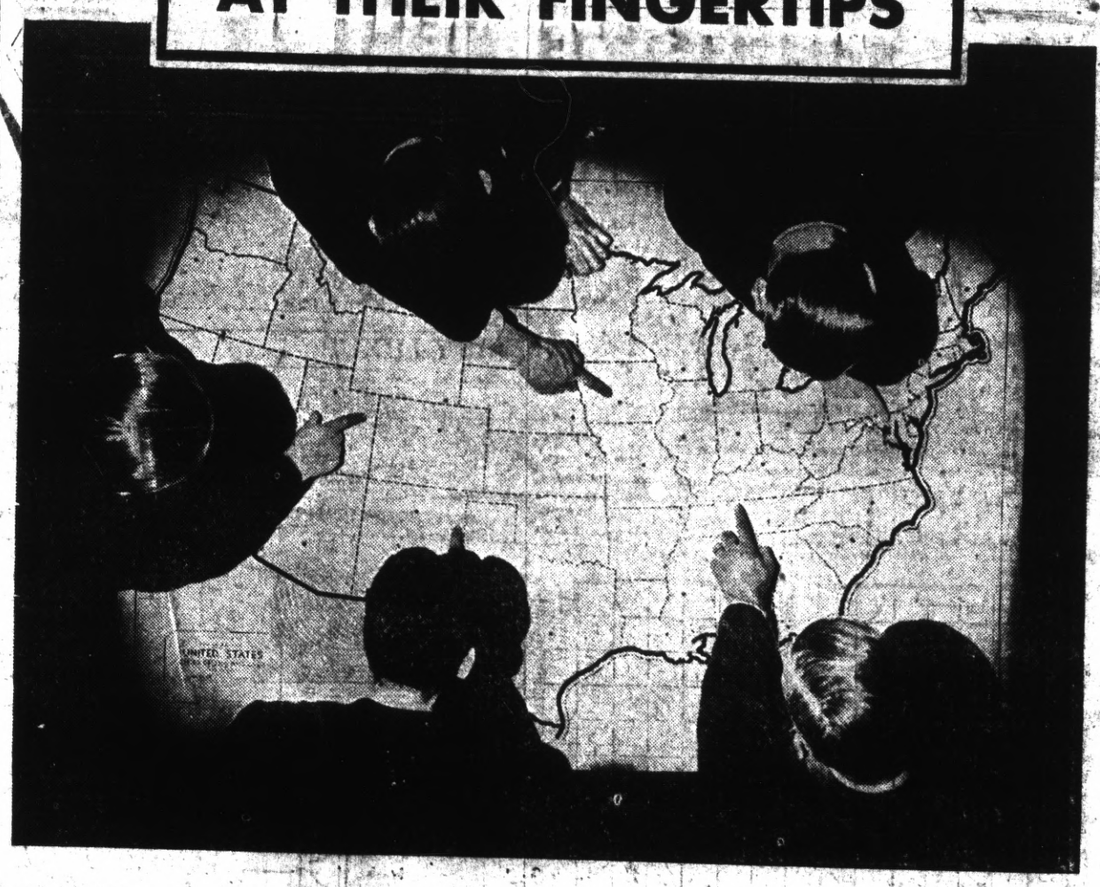

Eventually the Mercer County grand jury refused to indict Wendel, a disbarred lawyer, on the charge of murdering the Lindbergh baby. He then was brought to Brooklyn where he identified a photograph of Schlossman as being one of the men who kidnaped him in New York.
